of my committing that other fellow for the same offence?" Mr Wodehouse has entirely forgotten that, as a Magistrate, he has over and over again asserted his independence of everybody in a very decided way. Why should he now abcolutely evade his clear duty because a common jury has made a mistake? A better jury may turn up next time, and a better case may be presented before them. Mr Wodehouse even went so far in stultifying himself on this occa-

Now that Mr Wodeliouse appears to be determined to make his inflaence felt on the Beach, it becomes Sunday and Friday evenings at 7,30. All a question for the Government what steps are to be taken to counteract GERMAN BETHESDA CHAPEL - Service in this influence. Blunders are made by everybody every day; and honest men are busy enough oftentimes in correcting or doing their best to rectify them. But the part, or parts, played by Mr. H. E. Wodehouse during the last few months has been such as to call for extreme correctives. Had the same amount of justice's Justice been served out in England as it has pleased Mr Wodehouse to dispense of late, the chief actor would have been called to account long ere now. The Chinese are now griuping so broadly at the administration of Justice in this Colony. that the Executive could not do better than begin reform by introducing a new element into the Police Magistrate's Court, so that common sense and legal knowledge may have a chance in the conduct of its affairs. The powers possessed by Mr Wodehouse are manifestly unsuitable for the magisterial bench; let them be turned to better account elsewhere, and if this Colony is really too contracted a sphere for him he should certainly be encouraged to seek a larger field.

Some of the Home papers have been somewhat puzzled over the Chinese Loans lately floated and subscribed for in London, and a little confusion has arisen in the minds of many persons concerning the real grounds upon which the improved credit of the Chinese Imperial Government now rests. To any one who has watched the course of events in China for some years, the progress of China, and the desire now evinced by the Imperial Government to carry out its obligations with Foreign Powers, cannot fail to raise the credit of the country. China has repaid many of her loans, and this is a feature, curiously enough, which is regarded with pleasant surprise by many an Englishman who has lent money to foreign powers who borrow but do not repay. The appointment of Sir Robert Hart to the post of British Minister at Peking. and the closer relations between the English and Chinese nations which that step implies, are also calculated to raise materially the credit of China as a borrowing and repaying power. That China means to progress now more than she ever meant before—although the movement may be prompted more by teelings of self-defence and based on military notions—is still another reason other believe and may depre to con- Aut would may believe de trusted to suit the files of local, China, Japan, her care. Journals, however, which speak of the British Legation at Peking as H. M. Consulate, and described the present Charge d'Affairs as H. B. M. Consul at Peking, cannot be expected to know much about China. An article from the Financial News, reproduced in these columns the other evening, details the loans now held by Chins, and discusses the question of the security provided by the Imperial Maritime Customs. The importance attached to the security furnished by the foreign department of the Customs, for the repayment: of the principal and the regular payment of interest of these loans, is a little overdrawn. It must always be remembered that the foreign department inexplicable decisions given by Mr. H. of the Chinese Customs is merely a section of the Imperial fiscal system, and that the Customs (foreign and native) form only a department of the Imperial The German steamer Iphigenia reports: | curred at Wong-ner Cheong on the 9th | Government. DR Kerr's pulverization of Dr Ayres on the E. J. Keynes question of the inocuousness of the opium Appetite, does not prevent the latter from making an elaborate defence of his position in a recent number of the London & China Express. It is very noticeable, however, that Dr Ayres is now more careful than at first to acknowledge that opium is an evil and all that he says he objects to is an exaggerated statement of the evila. His philanthrophic desire that less missionary effort should be made to ameliorate the condition of China, while so much remains to be done at home, is really interesting, and gives one a glimpse as to the animus of his opposition to the antiopium agitation .- Chinese Recorder.

PER PALL MALL GAZETTE SEN-SATION.

Under the heading 'The Maiden Tribute to Modern Babylon, the Pall Mall Budget gives its reasons for creating the recent sensation, and defends itself in the most 'heroic language, from the serious charges which have been brought against it.

> It being generally thought that the Criminal Law Amendment Bill, after having thrice passed through the House of Lords. would be threatened with extinction in the Commons on the supposition that the public is not alive to its importance, the Pall Mall Gazette determined, in view of measure is designed to ameliorate, to careful, detailed report, which space prooludes our reproducing here, in the Pall Mall Gazette of Monday last and three aubsequent days. It is au authentic record of facts, 'abominable, unutterable. and worse than fables yet have feigned or been conceived, and nothing short of an overwhelming sense of public duty would have led to its being given to the world. But the ghastly record is un impeachably true, and as an effort. however slight a degree, to protect those will be read with a shuddering horror that will thrill throughout the world. After this awful picture of the crimes at present committed as it were under the very ægis of the law has been fully unfolded before the eyes of the public, we need not doub that the House of Commons will find time to raise the age during which. English girls - are protected from inexpiable wrong. The evidence leaves no room for doubt-first, as to the reality of the crimes against which the Amendment Bill is directed, and secondly, as to the efficacy of the protection extended by raising the age of consent We do not believe that incubers on the eve of a general election will refuse to consider protecting the daughters of the poor, which even the House of Lords has in three consecutive years declared to be imperatively necessary.

This, however, is but one, and that one of the smallest, of the considerations which justify the publication of the Report. The good it will do is manifest. These revels tions cannot fail to touch the heart and rouse the conscience of the English people. Terrible as is the exposure, the very horror of it is an inspiration. It speaks not of leaden despair, but with a joyful promise of Hatter-things-to-come - Wir-heissen-euch hoffen ! - 'We bid you be of hope.' Carlyle's last message to his country, the rhythmic word with which Goethe closes his modern psalm—that is what we have to repeat today, for assuredly these horrors, like others against which the conscience of mankin has revolted, are not eternal. 'Am I my sister's keeper ? that paraphrase of the excuse of Cain, will not dult the herce smar of pain which will be felt by every decen man who learns the kind of atrocities which are being perpetrated in cool blood in the very shadow of our churches and within stone's throw of our courts. It is a verit able slave trade that is going on around us but as it takes place in the heart of London it is a scandal—an outrage on public morality—even to allude to it. We have kept silence far too long. There are a few devoted workers who have been labouring for years endeavouring to save those might well address Gordon's homely renmach to the majority of us: you are eating and drinking and restin on good beds, we, and those with me, are watching by night and by day '-workin against this great wrong-happy, indeed: they escaped oblogny and abuse for endeayouring to remind us of our duty. longer will good men be able with easy conscience to join in that indignant 'Hush by which the evildoers have hitherto silenced, every attempt to make articulate the amothered wail that rises unceasing from the woeful under-world. There is now an end to that conspiracy of silence by which after every inquiry, the door was each time quickly closed upon 'the question, as the stone lid used to be shut down, in the 'Campo Santo of Naples' upon the mass of human corpses that 'lay festering beneath. That stone lid is raised now, never again. we may hope, to be closed until something be hidden out of sight. That much may be done, we have good ground for hoping, if only because so little has hitherto been attempted. A dull despair has unnerved the hearts of those who face this monstrous evil, and good men have sorrowfully turned to other fields where their exertions might expect a better return. But magnitude of this misery ought to lead to the redoubling, not to the benumbing of our exertions. No one can say how much suffering and wrong irremediable until the whole of the more and religious forces of the country brought to bear upon it. Yet, in dealing with this subject, the forces upon which we rely in dealing with other evils are almost all paralysed. The Home, the School the Church, the Press are silent. The law is actually an accessory to crime. Parents culpably neglect even to warn their children of the existence of dangers of which many learn the first time when they have become their prov. The Press, which reports verbatim all the scabrous details of the divorce courts, recoils in pious horror from the duty of shedding a flood of light upon these dark places, which indeed are full of the habitations of cruelty. But the failure of the Churches is, perhaps, the most conspiguous and the most complete. Christ's mission was to restore man to a semblance i of the Divine. The Child-Prostitute of our moral and religious movement, they would day is the image into which, with the tacif bold enough to sign their names. In view of the enormous result that has followed the simple setting forth of a few of the indisputable facts which the public has hitherto been afraid to face, we are filled with a new confidence and a greater hope. With all humility we feel tempted to exclaim with the martyr Ridley. Be of good cheer, for we have this day lighted up

shall never be extinguished.' assailants. The evil seems to unite with the good in order to increase to the uttermost the dynamic effect of our revelation. When we learned by whom the attempt to hide these crimes from the eye of the public was headed in Parliament and in the press, we took courage. Next to the honour of heading a cause in which we have the enthusiastic support of the best men. we covet nothing so-much as that of having to face the strendous opposition of the worst. We have fluttered the dovecotes of Corioli, and no mistake, and the vehemence of the vituperation, with which we are assailed is some slight indication of the necessify for the task which we have undertaken. As for the threats of criminal prosecution in which some even more foolish than the rest of their fellows have thought fit to in lulge, that is the one thing of all others which these who shrick for silence most dread. Surely those simpletons who sent down every afternoon to ask if we have been arrested can hardly imagine that the conspirators of silence will create for us such an opportunity of publicity as would be afforded by a trial in which, as a distinguished correspondent writes, we might subpæna almost half the Legislature in order to prove the accuracy of our revelations. Mrs Jefferies pleaded guilty in order to save her noble and Royal patrons from exposure. There would be no such abrupt termination to any proceedings which might be commenced against us, and that is very well known to those who talk this nonsense about prosecuting as criminals those who have been reluctantly driven to expose that at which the nation stands aghast. We await the commencement of those talked of proceedings with a composure that most certainly is not shared by those whom in such an extremity we should be compelled to expose in the witness-box.

Let there be no mistake about this thing. We have put our hand to the plough and we are not going to draw back. All this do not question its convincing nature; and angry clamour we foresaw, and allowed for. is very natural, and it amounts to very ittle.
